ABSTRACT

The present paper is mainly focused on the various aspects of the emerging new technology in libraries for sharing the resources using CD-ROM networking. CD-ROM is becoming the most popular media used for distribution of software due to its high storage capacity, durability and low production cost. IARI library offers database services based on their own collection or through the on-line access to the International databases with help of on-line computer and the internet. Databases play an important role in Library automation
