ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

When I started work in 1991, I had little more than a flabby set of ideas which, by themselves, were quite unworkable. If I have been able to give them better shape, the credit goes entirely to my teachers at the School of Social Sciences. Dr. Rajan Gurukkal kept me busy with frequent presentations which helped to clarify historiographic issues; S. Raju was consistently critical; the late Dr. Muralidharan and P. Sanal Mohan conducted many stimulating class-room discussions during the M.Phil./Ph.d. course work session of 1994-95. I can never forget Dr. Murali’s warm and jovial presence, his spirited intervention in debates, his remarkable abilities as a teacher. Dr. M. Gangadharan was the ideal guide; I thank him, above all, for having faith in me. Dr. T. K. Ahmad Nizar followed this work from beginning to end. When I first began discussing my ideas with him, someone warned: “You will never finish. He has too sharp an eye for faults”. While the first part of the warning has happily been proved false, I am entirely thankful that the second part was indeed true. To say the very least, it is Dr. Nizar who taught me to 'read' and 'write'. The long discussions and arguments we had were the most enjoyable part of this project. Above all I remember with pleasure the excitement of sharing ideas with him.

Several friends have kept me going through innumerable minor crises. I have had enjoyable times at the homes of Sreedevi and Shanku, Smt. Padmini Varkey, Mini Sukumar, Girceesh and Anna, Asha Chechi and Rajagopal, Elizabeth, Kabir and Ramakrishnan, Dr. Muralidharan, Radhika and Unny. My batchmates at the School of Social Sciences -- Reena, Susan, Sujatha, Shailaja, Smt. Omana, Shri. Alex, Shri. George Kallarakkal and others -- made 1994--'95 a most memorable year. Several friends have provided me with valuable source-materials: Ram Mohan, Unny, Dinesan, Susan, Gopalakrishnan. Shri. N.K. Ravindran gave me his entire collection of articles. Geetha Devi helped me to solve several practical difficulties. Rubin, Sajitha, Radhika, Sreedevi, Aji Kumari and S.K. Mini supported me with their affection. Raju introduced me to books and ideas which I would have never known otherwise. I am particularly grateful to Dr. S. Sivadas for his timely advice which prevented me from dropping this project altogether at one particularly difficult moment. The office-staff of the School of Social Science have always extended friendly support, particularly Hari, Madhumati, Jayashree, Kuttan Pillai and Dileepan. Madhumati typed some excellent drafts of this work, and Jayashree was generous with books. I can hardly express my gratitude to Shri. Rajan Babu. Without his able support, this thesis would have literally sunk like a stone.

Sources for this work were collected from many libraries in Kottayam and Thiruvananthapuram -- the library of the School of Social Sciences; the C.M.S. College Library, Kottayam; the Centre for Development Studies Library, Thiruvananthapuram; the Reference Library of the Malayala Manorama, Kottayam; Sethu Parvathy Bai Grandhasala, Kudamaloor; the Public Library, Kottayam; Kerala University Library; Mahakavi Ulloor Smaraka Grandhasala, Thiruvananthapuram; Shri Chittira Tirunal Smaraka Grandhasala, Thiruvananthapuram. I thank the staff of all these institutions for their whole-hearted cooperation. Particularly helpful were Shri.G.Priyadarshan and Shri.Chacko of the Reference Library, Malayala Manorama and Shri.Govindan Nair of the Mahakavi Ulloor Smaraka Grandhasala. I have immensely benefitted from Shri.Priyadarshan's research experience and from Shri. Govindan Nair's generosity and helpfulness.

My thanks are also due to Smt. Mary and Shri.Lawrence Sebastian, Omana, Joji other staff and students of M/s. Karunya Institute of Computer Technology, Kottayam for producing this thesis efficiently and promptly.

I have two mothers who have sustained me all through in their distinct ways: Smt. S.Rugmini Amma and Dr. C.Jayakumari. It is their reassuring presence that helped me to tide over many set-backs, depressed moods and disappointments. To them I owe a debt of gratitude that can never be fully repaid, and for that reason I do not dare to thank them. My brothers have always inspired me to work hard and hang on through all difficulties, and given me all the support I needed. Last but not least I must thank my babies who 'punctuated' this work, Shreekutty and Kunhammu, for being such sources of happiness. Special thanks are due to Shreekutty for her amused tolerance of Amma's obsession with books, writing, strange ideas and funny moods. Her delightful playfulness has lit up my life, helping me to find my childhood once more.
